SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.

1. About 2,000 students were enrolled at the University of Skoplje during the 1949-50 session. The School of Philosophy had 1264 students, the School of Medicine 115, and the remainder were in the other schools.
2. Students received 2,500 dinars a month from the Yugoslav Government for room and board. Privileged students boarded at the less expensive Studenski Dormitory.
3. In the Medical School there was a lack of books, literature and instruments, and food was insufficient. There were few medical technicians, no gloves for operations, and bodies were poorly preserved.
4. The main emphasis in the school was placed on political and military education. Of 24 hours a week, eight were for political and military matters, two for military theory, two for political economy, two for "Marxism-Leninism," and two for the history of the Yugoslav Communist Party. Eight extra hours were devoted to pre-military training. Students who had not served in the Army received special pre-military training, and examinations were held in political and military subjects. Despite the political education, the majority of the students are non-Communist, and show a particular aversion for pre-military education.

5. The following officials were on the University Board and on the staff of the Clinic Hospital, an annex:

Dr. Gavrilski, Chief of Administration, a Communist.
 Dr. Andrejevski, Macedonian, Communist leader in the hospital.
 Boro Sekerinski, 22 year old Macedonian, political secretary and an important Communist.
 Kiro Mijovski, an invalid and reserve Colonel. An important Communist who lectures on political economy.
 Desa Mijovska, wife of Kiro. A Communist who lectures on Marxism-Leninism.
 Dr. Isak Taser, Jew, apparently a Communist.
 Professor Jordan Pecijare, Macedonian, a Communist.

6. The following were non-Communists:

Dr. Stefan Bozdev, Dean of the Medical School.
 Dr. Zdenko Krizan, Croat.
